Welcome new staff!

Portage Park District welcomes Kent State University intern

My name is Miranda Linscott and I am the new intern for Portage Park District. I am a senior Recreation, Park, and Tourism Management major at Kent State University and will be graduating this May. After graduation I am moving to California and plan to be working with municipal/city parks. My hobbies include hiking, gardening, and baking. In my free time I work on video editing projects for an amateur studio that I run with my friends. I am excited for what this internship has in store for me and I am very thankful for the opportunity!

What is your favorite childhood memory?

Growing up my sister and I spent many summer days playing in the creek next to our house catching crawdads and snails. I loved being outdoors from a young age.

Five types of animal tracks to look for this winter

While things can seem pretty quiet and sparse during the winter, there are still plenty of things to see in the parks. Many animals are still quite active and you can see evidence of this as you are spending time outdoors.

These foxes do not hibernate; under extreme winter weather conditions they will reduce activity levels and take shelter for a day or two. Red foxes are nocturnal creatures, meaning that they are most active at night, feeding and moving from place to place. Nonetheless they are often found hunting during daylight hours.
